Renato! A Novel by Eugene Mirabelli Introduction by Douglas Glover

The life and times of the painter Renato Stillamare have become "a blazing magnum opus"

-Publishers Weekly

"Mirabelli has reinvented the peculiarly Italian, extravagantly melodramatic and often comic vision—the opera—in the novel form.... He is a master of montage, sudden narrative breaks, interwoven plots and themes....This truly is a wise and comforting book, funny and sad, wonderfully intelligent..."—from the introduction by Douglas Glover

"A bittersweet, beautiful story that...merits wide attention...[and] speaks wisely to life's truths."—Kirkus Reviews (starred review)

"Age bends and fate twists this artist, but he carries on with his 'perishable art and human love'—the indefatigable artist as

"A major canvas...The real and the surreal blend together seamlessly; the love affair endures."—Nicholas Delbanco, author of Why Writing Matters

"For anyone who loves the work of James Salter or William Trevor, Eugene Mirabelli is another writer to treasure."—Elizabeth Hand, author of Generation Loss

Sea of Hooks A Novel by Lindsay Hill

This novel interweaves the two worlds inhabited by a broken boy, Christopher Westall: the sphere of ordinary days and weeks held in a precarious balance against a shifting field of inward images and voices. Traumas will shatter this balance. This utterly brilliant debut novel recounts Christopher's youth in San Francisco (where he struggles within the icy Victorian household of his mother), and his parallel quest as a young man, in Bhutan, for answers to the questions that haunt him. The book is literally comprised of the shattered fragments of Christopher's world: that is, of a thousand discrete paragraphs, each given its own title. But the novel is not a puzzle per se, but rather a series of disruptions and resumptions.

"But it is Hill's language that dominates this story,... Christopher's meditations on death, memory, the relations of bones to the self, not to mention rain and snow and fog and the cosmos, are mystical, highly poetic and musically rendered—an almost impossibly sustained performance from beginning to end. Nearly every paragraph astonishes, every moment rich with magic and daring. Reminiscent of Robert Pirsig and Herman Hesse in its concern with authenticity, Sea of Hooks also has the unbearable anguish of Kafka's diaries—making for an unforgettable trip."—Publishers Weekly

The Sky Weeps for Me A Novel by Sergio Ramirez Translated by Leland H. Chambers

In post-revolutionary Nicaragua, the Chief of Intelligence in the Office of Drug Investigations, Dolores Morales, takes a call from his counterpart, Deputy Inspector Dixon, who alerts him that a large luxury yacht is grounded and abandoned on the Caribbean coast. It appears to be a simple case of drug smuggling. But when Morales opens the scanty evidence package there's only a bloody T-shirt and a singed paperback book...until Doña Sofía, the office janitor, asks "Have that book's pages been checked over yet?" and a woman's business card falls out. Through a maze of deception, corruption, and murders, the irrepressible Doña Sofía joins the two inspectors as sidekick in their race to learn why the boat was ditched and where the bodies are buried. Soon, though, the trio suspect that a Cali drug cartel capo known as Pinocchio, along with Caupolicán, one of their Sandinista comrades from long ago, might be master minding a dangerous, international conspiracy.

The Sky Weeps for Me offers a host of memorable characters drawn from every strata of Nicaraguan society — rich and poor, working class and professional, as well as scheming politicians, shady casino operators, and tent revivalists — all of them caught up in a relentless drama that bit by bit exposes what happens when revolutionary leaders turn into reactionaries, and how no one is entirely innocent in a country struggling to hold onto the last shreds of its ideals. "The local color, and especially the feel — especially of the aging (former-)revolutionary generation, in a nation that hasn't managed to live up to the ideals they once fought for — are the novel's biggest selling point. The Sky Weeps for Me . . . captures and conveys . . . only a slice of contemporary Nicaragua, but a fairly solid and deep one." — The Complete Review

Divine Punishment A Novel by Sergio Ramirez Translated by Nick Caistor with Hebe Powell

n this, the greatest work of a storied Literary career—now in English translation-Sergio Ramírez transforms the most celebrated criminal trial in Nicaraguan history-the alleged murders by a Casanova named Oliverio Castañeda of two high society women and his employer in 1933-into an examination of the entire Nicaraguan society at the brink of the first Somosa dictatorship. Passion, money, sex, gossip, political intrigue, medical malpractice and judicial corruption all merge into a novel that reads like a courtroom drama wrapped in yellow journalism disguised as historical fiction fronting a political scandal of the first order.

"This is a big, beautiful novel—a compelling historical drama of competing narratives and colorful characters that is selfaware and tinged with black humor."

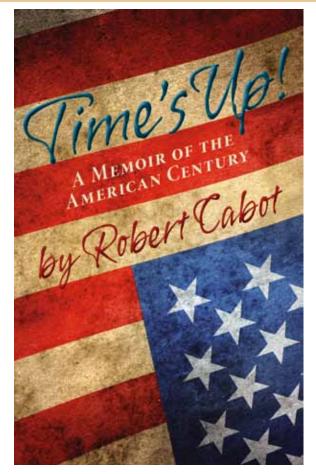

-Publishers Weekly

"Divine Punishment is by far the best novel by Sergio Ramírez . . . and one of my favorite novels, period. Set in the Nicaraguan city of León in the 1930s, and based on a true story, it concerns the case of Oliverio Castañeda, a young charmer and social climber accused of killing neighbors, patrons, and lovers by poisoning. The convoluted affair (still used as a case study in Central American law schools) was never solved, and Ramírez himself cagily leaves it openended. Hilarious, riveting, beautifully constructed and written."—DAN BELLM

"... the main character is language, as well as the entire society of the city of León....[Divine Punishment] is a poetic novel, as well as being dramatic and pathetic, and tragic, humorous, macabre, romantic, realistic, and political..."

Time's Up! A Memoir of the American Century by Robert Cabot Preface by Robert W. Fuller

Blending history, essay, travelogue, and autobiography, Time's Up! is a personal and political saga: luminous, probing, and absorbing. At constant odds with his Boston Brahmin lineage and upbringing, novelist Robert Cabot confronts white privilege, rejects the conventional trappings of wealth and fame, and critiques our American heritage of colonialism, imperialist yearnings, and penchant for perpetual war. In alternating chapters we witness his life and the nation's, from the sepia-toned 'twenties through the color-drained Great Depression, from World War Two through the disquieting cold war, the rise of the counter-culture, and the decades after. In particular, he tells of his search across fifty years for a place in the world. "It was my century too," he writes. "I return to it, to my memories of my world and my life, the swirls of attitudes and events and people around a long, privileged, and wildly varied American life." Whether as a U.S. State Department official, co-founder of an intentional community, citizen-ambassador, philanthropist, conservationist, or self-exiled novelist, he recounts his adventures around the world-in Kabul, Kunjerab, Moscow, Andalucia, Peshawar, Chaing Mai, Algiers, L'Île Rousse, Naples, Tuscany, Bastia, Rome, Bésançon, Paris, Thailand, Cambodia, Ceylon, Taiwan, Laos, and many other places-and introduces us to a large and equally diverse cast of characters.

Time's Up! is a kaleidoscopic self-portrait, and a devastating examination of our nation in slow but almost certain decline. Cabot's expansive literary gifts are on full display, whether delivering vital strikes against American "exceptionalism," or gratefully embracing "whatever beauty and love life has given us."

"Robert Cabot not only fought in World War II, lived on the land communally in the West Coast counter-culture, and sailed across the Atlantic alone, he sailed through many of the historic moments of the twentieth century. And he has recorded them with a sharp eye. Seldom has anyone ventured so far from the world of Boston Brahmins in which he was born."

-Adam Hochschild, author of Lessons from a Dark Time and Other Essays

"Time's Up! is an irresistible read. Robert Cabot's penetrating insights and lyrical prose bring us along on his remarkable journey through America's century. I love the book—it's a fascinating history and an ode to the beauty of life."

-Nancy Horan, author of Loving Frank

Collected Essays by Mary Butts

Edited and Introduced by Joel Hawkes

The thirteen essays and 117 literary reviews gathered in this book were written largely between 1932 and 1937, the most productive period of Mary Butts's foreshortened literary career: she died at 47. After spending most of the 'twenties on the Continent, she repatriated to London before settling with a new husband permanently in Sennen, a Cornish village close to Land's End. Famously impractical about money, she must have welcomed the editor Hugh Ross Williamson's invitation to review for The Bookman as a means to supplement her small allowance and book royalties. Considering her charming and personal reviews, such work would seem also to have given her pleasure; it is far sight from hackwork. Within a short time she was engaged to write reviews and essays for other prominent journals and newspapers — The Sunday Times, The Daily Telegraph, The Spectator, The Manchester Guardian, The London Mercury, Time and Tide, Week-End Review, John O'London Weekly, The Adelphi, Everyman, and even Crime —which she accomplished while somehow maintaining a steady production of stories, novels, and a memoir of her childhood, and all this despite marital strife, financial pressures, and worsening health. For the shorter pieces, as a reviewer for hire, it's doubtful she had much choice of books, but her keenest interests and areas of expertise, as well as friendships with contemporary authors, were probably known to her editors, who commissioned accordingly. The range, variety, and depth of subjects is little short of remarkable, from classical literature to popular fiction (historicals, mysteries, the uncanny), from history (French and English) to Eastern religion to the American Depression to gardening, and on and on. Moreover, "reviews" is a misnomer for most of Butts's shorter pieces, since her approach is conversational and opinionated, and sprinkled with interesting asides. Following her death a eulogistic note in Time and Tide read: "[though] her natural abundance sometimes made her a misleading guide to other people's intentions, the depth of her knowledge and the essential truth of her vision gave a special value to her judgements even when she appeared to be going off at an unlikely tangent. She touched nothing that she did not in some way enrich." In fact, her erudition can be formidable, her thought associations eclectic, her tone scholarly, elegant, jazzy or passionate. Moreover, her longer essays-concerning Aldous Huxley, Baron Corvo, supernatural fiction, among other subjects-are more like English gardens: structured and carefully tended, but allowing for wide spaces of intellectual play.

EXPANDED EDITION IN PREPARATION FOR 2021

Ten New Fairy Tales by Robert Kelly Illustrated by Emma Polyakov

Between Christmas Day and Childermas of 2016, the fabulist Robert Kelly wrote these ten delightful tales filled with wonder and enchantment, and with suitably beguiling entities as well:

$16 paperback 72 pages, 5 x 7.5" 978-1-62054-037-4 Limited first edition Rights: World spectral foxes, a telepathic ape and antelope, shadows that speak, an odd djinn, a feline conductor, an umbrella-loving serpent, protean elves, and other visions of the ultimate reality just beyond sight. These tales possess such alluring titles as "The Fox and the Other Side." "The Priest's Peculiar Wife," "The Boy in the Camel," "The Leper's Touch," and "The Rainbow." And each story is accompanied by an original pen-and-ink drawing by the artist-scholar Emma Polyakov.

This special first edition is limited to 225 numbered copies signed by author and artist.

"A story is the best gift we can give one another. A story can stay in mind or come to life again. When a story is simple enough it becomes a myth. Meanwhile I try to tell all the stories the mind tells me. And keep listening." — Robert Kelly

In addition to many books in various genres, mostly poetry, ROBERT KELLY has published five collections of short fiction with McPherson & Company: A Transparent Tree, Doctor of Silence, Cat Scratch Fever, Queen of Terrors, and The Logic of the World. He teaches in the Written Arts Program at Bard College. His two most recent books are long poems, Calls and The Caprices.

EMMA O'DONNELL POLYAKOV studied art at Bard College, and currently teaches and writes about religion. She is Assistant Professor of Religious and Theological Studies at Merrimack College, and the author of Remembering the Future: The Experience of Time in Jewish and Christian Liturgy.

How to Imagine A Narrative on Art and Agriculture by Gianfranco Baruchello & Henry Martin

Taking the farm he operates outside Rome as his starting point, Gianfranco Baruchello — one of the outstanding poly-artists to emerge from Italy in the 1960s — explores the spaces and forces that surround and nurture imagination and perception. How to Imagine began as a series of conversations between the authors, which accounts for its captivating and personal tone, fired by the wit of a natural raconteur and filled with lively and unexpected revelations. We are delighted and honored to re-present this wonderful book with a 35th Anniversary Edition.

"If you can imagine Marcel Duchamp as a farmer, you'll begin to catch the flavor of this wry, idiosyncratic work, in which the day-to-day concerns of husbandry are wonderfully intertwined with a series of intense, insightful meditations on the possibilities of art." — Donald Barthleme

"Baruchello's spirited monologue starts from earth and extends into politics, Duchamp, the soul, Christo, bees, feminism, lettuce and death... He is not only an original and intuitive thinker but funny and charming.... Faced with a cow, or an enormous swarm of bees, Mr. Barukchello talks. Magnificently." — Donald Hall, New York Times Book Review

"This is a very good book...it is a book on how to take a farm and strip away all the imaginary concepts our culture has laid on it and see what it really is. It never gets second-hand and it never gets artistically false."— Robert Pirsig, author of Zen and the Art of Motorcycle Maintenance

The Heat Death of the Universe And Other Stories, by Pamela Zoline

Introduced by Thomas M. Disch

Every so often a first book captures the attention of a broad spectrum of readers, draws extraordinary praise from critics, and catapults the author overnight into an established presence. That happened with this book in 1988, and continues to occupy a special position.

In these three novellas and two short stories we are taken from the ontological recesses of Sarah Boyle's kitchen into an encyclopaedic cure for insomnia, and then find recounted what must surely be the most catastrophic (and hilarious) genealogy in modern fiction. Along the way, as the cultural detritus of Western Civ seeps in between the quotidian cracks, Zoline never loses sight of life's personal dimensions. So we are delighted to present a 30th Anniversary paperback edition.

"Nuclear war, obesity, failed marriages, kidnapped children — threats of destruction haunt Ms. Zoline's imagination. She attacks those fears in fiction that revitalizes the labels 'post-modern' and 'feminist,' by lacing her work with a healthy dose of fantasy that links her to Angela Carter, her nearest literary sibling." — New York Times Book Review

"The work of a seasoned writer who makes us see the world in a brand new way."—Philadelphia Inquirer

"Such are the marvelous qualities of her writing that a number of literary fads could come and go, but The Heat Death of the Universe would live on."—LOCUS

"Weird, challenging, distinctive, jolting: a polymathic product of fine writing, mordant commentary, and subtle thinking." — Kirkus Reviews

"Her stories are vastly different, yet imagery and detailed approach tie them together as if with colored threads." — Library Journal

"Very strange and very enjoyable." - Booklist

The Iguana A Novel by Anna Maria Ortese

Translated by Henry Martin

In this magical novel a count from Milan stumbles upon a desolate community of lost noblemen on an uncharted island off the coast of Portugal. When he discovers, to his astonishment, that their ill-treated servant is in fact a maiden iguana, and then proceeds to fall in love with her, the reader is given a fantastic tale of tragic love and delusion that ranks among the most affecting in contemporary literature.

"The reptilian servant is only the first in a series of fantastic touches that transform the narrative into a satiric fable dense with the echoes of Shakespeare's 'Tempest' and Kafka's 'Metamorphosis.'...The Iguana is a superb performance."—New York Times Book Review

"Anna Maria Ortese has called up the myths of the tortured aristocrat; the abused brute; the false innocent who cannot admit his desires; the blameless sinner caught helplessly in her sins; and, above all, the myth of the human soul." — The Nation

"The Iguana is a novelistic fable invented with surprise after surprise on page after page, a calmly reasoned nightmare. ...It has its own logic and respects its own archetype — the wrinkled little bright green beast marked by fate and faithful to those who despise and abuse her. She is the archetype that excites our sense of anguish." — Alfredo Giuliani, La Republica (Milan)

"The translator captures well Ortese's fascinating voice...." — ALA Choice

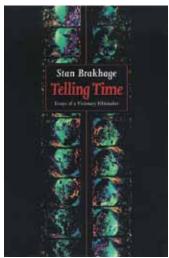

"Even when Ortese measured herself against the novel — and she has done so stupendously — she remains a writer of tales; and her most illuminated tale remains The Iguana, for which human language has but a single adequate term: the book is a masterpiece." — Dario Bellezza

Telling Time Essays of a Visionary Filmmaker by Stan Brakhage

Throughout a career spanning half a century, Stan Brakhage the foremost experimental filmmaker in America, and perhaps the world—wrote controversial essays on the art of film and its intersections with poetry, music, dance, and painting. Published in small circulation literary and arts journals, they were gathered later into such books as Metaphors on Vision and Film at Wit's End. Beginning in 1989, and for a decade thereafter, Brakhage wrote the essays in Telling Time as an occasional column for Musicworks, a Toronto quarterly. Ostensibly about the relation of film to music, they soon enlarged to explore primary concerns beyond film, including Brakhage's aesthetic theories based on the phenomenology of human cognition. In these essays he is as brilliant discussing Gertrude Stein or romantic love as he is on child psychology, astronomy, and physiology, all the while teasing out vital correspondences between the arts, and upending conventional ideas of how we perceive. Above all, he shares his theories and discoveries in the spirit of establishing a groundwork for many varieties of human liberation. His prose is filled with flashes of insight, elaborated metaphors, playful elisions, shorthand puns and neologisms, personal digressions, surprising epiphanies, leaps of faith, and affronts to authority. He appeals to the imagination, and invites us to a more profound and personal experience of art.

"The twenty-six pieces collected [here] establish Brakhage's place among the most elastic minds of his generation. ...Telling Time is an elegant, thoroughly engaging, timely and wide-ranging work... [it] is an essential book for anyone interested in Brakhage, theories of visual perception, the relationship of film to music, and the beats in-between."—Brett Kashmere, Canadian Journal of Film Studies

The Other Planet A Novel of the Future by Ascher/Straus

Foreword by Stephen Beachey

Thirty years ago this surreal, speculative novel predicted the Internet, our addiction to celebrity, and the obsession with living in the FUTURE (if there is one). A new generation of readers awaits.

"The Other Planet is one of the indispensable novels of the twentieth century, a complex and unsentimental examination of the tensions created by rapid social and technological change. Carefully constructed possibilities may be gleefully abandoned or lives that seem coherent in their design may be suddenly eclipsed by larger forces. Something sinister is still happening at the edges of perception, something both desirable and terrifying. In The Other Planet, the most common name given to that thing that inspires both longing and dread is 'the future.' ... This is fiction driven by ideas, ideas about the future, the self, and the relentlessness of the everyday. These ideas are often manifest in conversations, and so every idea is refuted, complicated, taken to its absurd extreme, or mutated in an unintended direction so that we are constantly reminded of the unavoidable self-referentiality of our own ideas, the degree to which they are trapped in a corner: the corner of our bodies, our histories, the pictures of reality we most like to look at, the stories we put ourselves to sleep with at night." --- FROM THE FOREWORD BY STEPHEN BEACHY

"A pretty definitive statement about the post-Modern experience . . . The future is sparked by a mysterious stranger, Humberto Vilanescu. Rich, foreign, partly messianic and partly Mephistophelian, he's a combination of the Aga Khan, Howard Hughes and The Man Who Fell to Earth. . . . This is a mysterious, absorbing, sexy and troubling reflection on these weird times, and it should be read." — John Strausbaugh, City Paper

"Full of surreal dreams and brief, startlingly erotic episodes.... The book is best at ordinary life, with a nod to William Carlos Williams in its surprising, saturated colors and sudden, sensuous cravings." — Publishers Weekly
